ment. This year so far things have different in terms of weather. Temperatures have been warm the past 45 days, while we have had some rains, things have pretty dry since we entered the dog days of summer. Regardless, at some point things will cool off and fall rains that we get in September will promote armyworm activity. Before we get to that point I wanted to go over some basic armyworm information.

the face. Armyworms are very small (less than 1/8 inch) at first, cause little plant damage and as a result often go unnoticed. Larvae feed for 2-3 weeks and full grown larvae are about 1 to 1 1/2 inches long. Given their immense appetite, great numbers, and marching ability, fall armyworms can damage entire fields or pastures in a few days.

Management. Fall armyworm outbreaks in pastures and hay fields often occur following a rain which apparently creates favorable conditions for eggs and small larvae to survive in large numbers. Hay fields with Continued on A5

As a small-business owner, you're responsible for two families: the one you have at home, and the one you have through work. No matter what your business, a well-conceived insurance and benefits program is essential. If you die or become disabled, insurance can help protect your family and your business.

To get a sense of how well you've planned for these responsibilities, ask yourself these auestions:

• What will happen to my business and family if I die or become disabled?

• What will happen if certain key employees die or become permanently disabled? • How can I attract and retain the best employees? • How can I help ensure that my business will be able

Why are these agreements so imto weather unforeseen financial portant? You might think that if you die, your family could maintain their income by running the business themselves or by hiring someone to handle the day-to-day management. The fact is, your loved ones may not have the skills or the desire for the job, and your co-owners may not welcome the idea of an unintended partner. With a properly structured and funded buy-sell agreement, your business partners won't have to scramble to come up with the money to buy out your share of the business, and you'll be guaranteed that your survivors will be compensated fairly and promptly.

loans with personal assets. If you have business loans and were to die before they were paid off, you might think your family could sell or liquidate the business to cover the debts and provide financial security for them. In reality, this rarely happens. When the family is forced to sell the business quickly, they may have to sell at a discount or during market conditions that make the business less attractive. In other cases, the business may be worth very little without the proprietor or partner. Individual life insurance can protect your family by providing funds to cover debts, ongoing living expenses and future plans, in the event that something happens to you.

Life insurance also can be structured to fund a buy-sell agreement. This is a contract among owners to buy a deceased owner's share of the business at a previously agreed upon price in the event of death, disability or retirement.

funded by life insurance policies purchased on the lives of each of the business owners. The amount is usually specified in a contract created with the help of an attorney. You can enter into a buy-sell agreement at any time, but it often makes sense to do so when a business is formed or when new owners are brought into the business. Because business values can fluctuate, it's important to review the contract with your accountant at least once per year or to include a calculation method in the agreement. Also be sure the insurance coverage funding the agreement is up to date. Business owners can also insure against the risk of becoming disabled and unable to work. In this case, disability income buyout insurance would fund the buy-sell agreement, allowing the disabled owners to be bought out, typically after a one-year waiting period.

Key person insurance is another essential component of a smart business continuation plan. Key business when I retire?

One of the first things any business owner needs to consider is how to protect against events that may threaten the future of the business, like the death or disability of a proprietor, partner or key employee.

Let's start with the worst-case scenario: the death of one of the business owners. What will happen to your business if you die? Many small-business owners take out loans to help grow their businesses, and often secure these history: First Graham Bancorp has owned and operated Graham National Bank, First Security Bank, and Westside Bank under separate charters in North Texas for generations. TO TEXAS!"

Established in 1890 and headquartered in Graham, Texas, they have served Texans for almost 130 years. As they have grown, the decision was made to consolidate and create one new name for all locations. This resulted in Ciera Bank. Ciera Bank is a state-chartered, full service community bank with eight banking locations in Aubrey, Denton, Hickory Creek, Flower Mound, Fort Worth, Aledo, Bryson, and Graham. They embrace entrepreneurial spirit, conservative values, western heritage and "BANKING THAT'S TRUE

Should you get one?

Yes, ma'ammogram.

Schedule yours today.

If you're a woman 40+, Texas Health recommends getting a yearly screening mammogram, because early detection is our best weapon in the fight against breast cancer. And since we understand there can be some anxiety around the experience, we make it as comfortable and convenient as possible. With 18 locations across DFW, our facilities feel more like a spa than an imaging center, and we offer appointments that typically last only 30 minutes.
